KeyMacro is a powerful, easy to use keystroke macro recorder. If you want to record a keyboard macro you need KeyMacro. With KeyMacro, you record just a few keystrokes on your keyboard and KeyMacro automates them for you. KeyMacro has a built-in editor, so you can edit your macros on the fly. There are three modes of operation, capture, edit, and replay. You can also manually specify which keystrokes you want to record, with the preview. KeyMacro has three modes of operation, capture, edit, and replay. Capture mode: This is the default mode of operation. It captures keystrokes and saves them in a text file. With the capture mode you can record any keystroke combinations and any sequence of keystrokes. To record a sequence of keystrokes, hold down the SHIFT key as you press the first keystroke and release it, then hold down the CAPS LOCK key as you press the second keystroke, and release the CAPS LOCK key as you press the third keystroke. If you want to skip any keystrokes, hold down the SPACEBAR key during the keystroke sequence. You can skip any keystrokes when recording by holding down the SPACEBAR key at the beginning of the sequence and releasing the keystroke when you want to skip a keystroke. The macro is saved in a text file, for example 'macro1.txt'. The name of the text file is the name of the macro, for example 'macro1.txt'. If the macro name has spaces or any other special characters, you must enclose the name of the text file with double quotes, for example "macro1.txt". You can rename the file by clicking on the "Rename..." button and specifying a new name. To change the name of the text file, click on the "Rename..." button. The default name is 'macro1.txt', so when you click on the "Rename..." button it will be renamed to 'macro1.txt'. You can change this to another name by clicking on the "Rename..." button and specifying a new name. After recording, you can see what the macro does, by clicking on the "Preview" button. If you are not sure whether you have recorded all keystrokes, you can review your macro by clicking on the "Edit" button 1d6a3396d6
